

Doc Hollywood Project

The Doc Hollywood Project is an effort spearheaded by SNHS Board member, Dr. Neil Shulman, M.D. Dr. Shulman hopes that his project will help ease integration of medical knowledge into high school curriculum. The SNHS supports the Doc Hollywood Project as a means of giving students an understanding of practical scientific knowledge.

William James (the "father of psychology") once wrote that a student's attention will be held if the information to be learned is connected to something already interesting. James wrote that the most interesting thing to man were things that apply to his self. Through the Doc Hollywood Project, we hope that students interest in their own bodies will increase their interest in learning the science of medicine.

The Doc Hollywood Project has Dr. Shulman's book, "Let's Play Doctor", available online for free with quizzes. Click here to read the book and start taking quizzes [www.dochollywoodproject.com].

The SNHS members who completes all of the quizzes with the highest scores in each state will receive a CD-ROM from Tietronix Software.
